Lun , ...

Rich historical and cultural heritage. Three UNESCO World Heritage Sites, globally renowned museums and a vibrant cultural agenda throughout the year.

Amazing food. A wide variety of restaurants and high quality local ingredients.

5

Favourable weather conditions Low levels of rainfall. many hours of sun throughout the year, annual average

Madrid's biodiversity in your reach, only one hour from the city

Sierra de Guadarrama National Park and Sierra del Rincón Biosphere Reserve are two emblematic protected areas which contain very varied landscapes, from high mountains (peaks over 2000m), extensive Scots pine forests, hundred year old oak woodland, open cork oak and ash pastureland, grasslands at the foot of the mountains and important water ecosystems (five reservoirs which supply water to Madrid, the heads of the Lozoya and Manzanares rivers, the Peñalara glacial lakes).

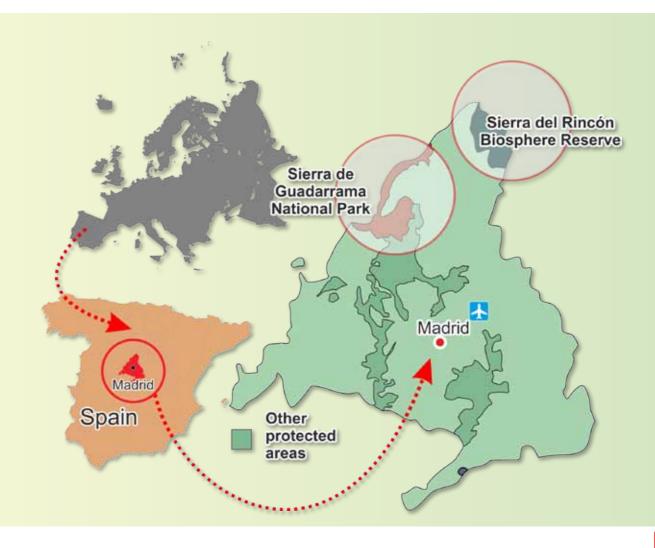

The cultural and natural heritage possessed by these areas is explained in Visitor Centres and Environmental Education Centres.

Tourist service companies located in the area offer experiences directed at a wide range of tourists, from families with children and agrotourism to birdwatching trips where keen twitchers can spot emblematic species such as the imperial eagle and black vulture. The landscapes lend themselves to all manner of activities: hiking, mountain biking, horse riding, rock climbing, cross country skiing, canoeing. Of course it is vital to follow all regulations and guidelines to ensure that the natural environment is not harmed in any way.

All this is combined with a cultural landscape that has been crafted by human hands and has been linked throughout its history with the city of Madrid and its inhabitants.

This diversity can also be enjoyed in the local food, with such delicacies as Guadarrama beef, goats cheeses, pulses and Madrid wines.

Madrid is an Ecotourism destination which boasts one National Park, two Biosphere Reserves and several Nature 2000 protected areas. It offers an incredible range of tourist expericiences which will let you discover all of its natural and cultural heritage.

SIERRADE GUADARRAMA

A MEDITERRANEAN HIGH MOUNTAIN NATIONAL PARK.

The National Park is situated in the western part of the Sistema Central mountain range and covers the peaks of the Sierra de Guadarrama, in the autonomous regions of Madrid and Castilla y León.

Peñalara peak, rising to 2,428 m.a.s.l., is the highest point, and along with four neighbouring peak sover 2,200 m. forms the striking Macizo de Peñalara crest. Cuerda Larga is another impressive mountain range which rises above 2,000 m. for 16km.

The Peaks that inspired Velázquez

The blue-grey slopes of the Sierra de Guadarrama form the background to Velázquez's famous paintings which you can admire in Madrid's Prado Museum. The Sierra's jagged granite blocks are the city's most attractive skyline. This unique landscape has been formed over time by the erosion of granite rock.

Small villages nestle where they can. Pico Peñalara (2,428m) is the highest peak, on whose slopes we can see much evidence of ice erosion: morraines, depressions and lakes. The Macizo de Peñalara Wetlands are listed on the RAMSAR Convention list, with more than 240 high mountain wetlands, including lakes, ponds, streams and mires of high ecological value.

A series of vegetation changes up and down this grantite landscape

The peaks of the Sierra de Guadarrama harbour a Mediterranean high mountain flora with their own unique adaptations. At all heights you can find specific vegetation, with Mediterranean, Atlantic and Continental influences.

Hikers exploring the peaks of the National Park will go through spiky juniper thickets and may encounter mountain goats, bluethroats and eagles. The pine and oak forests on the lower slopes offer a wonderfully peaceful retreat from the hustle and bustle of the big city. In the holm oak and ash pastureland, visitors can contemplate bulls raised for bullfighting and locally reared beef that steals the show in the local cuisine.

La Pedriza Granite: rock climbing school

The climate and intense breakdown of granite formations have moulded a unique landscape, especially in La Pedriza, where the boulders, gulleys and towers resemble sculptures. Visible from Madrid, this rocky landscape has been the backdrop to many famous films such as El Cid Campeador.

On the smooth profile of the sides of Cuerda Larga (approx 2,000m) hikers can discover the tough high mountain flora with its unique adaptations. There are hiking routes for all levels of fitness and difficulty.

Easy to access biodiversity

There are 255 species of vertebrates, of which 148 are birds. Some, such as the black vulture, imperial eagle and black stork, are among the most endangered in the Iberian Peninsular. More than 58 species of mammals can be found in the park, including mountain goats, roe deer, wildcats, otters, badgers and Pyrenean desmans. Among the invertebrates we can find the extraordinary Mountain apollo butterflies and Spanish moon moths.

A century of sport in the Sierra de Madrid

In the nineteenth century the intellectuals of the Institución Libre de Enseñanza popularised the Sierra de Madrid as a place for city dwellers to do outdoor pursuits. Ever since, the Sierra de Guadarrama has been the ideal location for many active pursuits: hiking, with its extensive network of well marked trails; rock climbing on the granite outcrops of La Pedriza; cross country skiing; snow shoeing; mountain biking on marked trails and road cycling around the Park. High level training for those who want to explore the Sierra de Guadarrama and do their favourite sport in a sustainable way.

Internationally renowned historical heritage

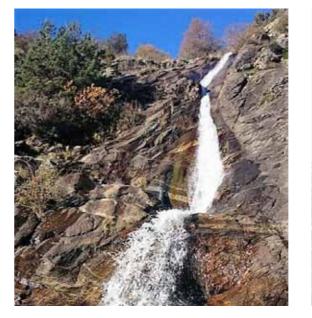

The Sierra de Guadarrama has long been appreciated. As a place of retreat and meditation for the monks in El Paular Monastery in Rascafría. As a place of defence like the Castle of Manzanares el Real. The jewel in the crown has to be El Escorial Monastery, World Heritage Site, situated on the outskirts of the National Park. Visitors can combine a trip to these heritage sites with their visit to the National Park.

Nature Tourism in the Sierra de Guadarrama National Park and Sierra del Rincón Biosphere Reserve

A History and Future of natural resources and water

Man settled in this place in ancient times, as is evidenced in the Neanderthal Valley arqueological site on the river Lozoya. The Sierra de Guadarrama encompasses all of Madrid's history, its people and occupations over the years (shepherds, farmer, coalminers, woodcutters, stonecutters, miners, labourers). The past, present and future of the city of Madrid is intimately linked to the Sierra, and the city owes its crystal clear rivers and cool clean air to these highlands.

Mediterranean haute cuisine with local products

The Sierra is home to high quality products such as Guadarrama beef, goats cheeses, lamb and wild mushrooms. These local delicacies can be enjoyed in both rural and city restaurants.

Five villages with their own identity, history and culture. Four seasons which completely change the appearance of the area. Three colours which decorate its landscapes, green in spring and summer, copper in autumn and occasionally white in winter. Two traditions: crop farming and animal rearing. One location: Sierra del Rincón.

A corner of Madrid from another time

Visitors to this Biosphere Reserve can discover what life used to be like in rural Madrid. A unique bolthole which has resisted the environmental pressures of urbanisation and large scale leisure developments. Only one hour by car from Madrid, very close to the Sierra de Guadarrama National Park, the Sierra del Rincón stands out for its well preserved villages and natural environment, which seem to have changed little since the Middle Ages due to their isolated location.

A living museum of rural life and architecture in Madrid

Over centuries slate workers, millers, blacksmiths, beekeepers and coalminers have left their mark on the Sierra del Rincón which can still be seen to this day. This part of the Sierra de Madrid is unique in its preservation of this rural architecture that is so closely linked to livestock farming. Houses in this region are extensions of the natural landscape, since they are built out of the rock that they sit atop (gneiss, slate, granite, quartz). The inclement weather conditions have dictated where roads go and the tiny dimentions of the windows on houses. Materials and construction techniques reflect the terrain. Walls of slate or gneiss would be sealed inside with adobe or mud and pebbles. Pine and oak trees would supply the beams. These simple houses would be shared with livestock.

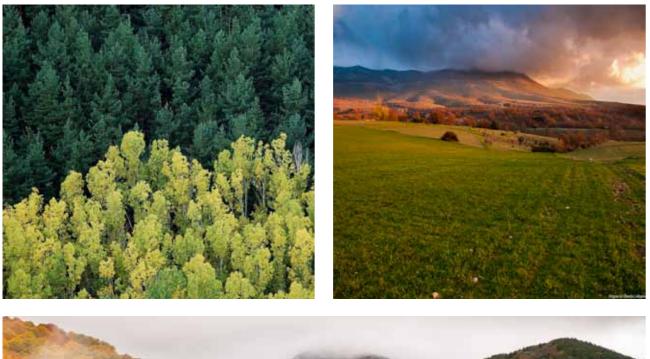

A mosaic of woods and fields

The most common vegetation is oak woodland, interspersed with pine trees, scrubland, hay fields, vegetable cultivation and hedgerows. Woodland species in the Biosphere Reserve include yew, holly, apple tree, mountain elm, rowan and walnut, as well as wild mushrooms.

Oaks form the original woodland and cover 2,600m of protecting forest with their leaves for most of the winter. El Hayedo (Beech forest) is uniquely valuable. Its protected status makes it exceptional in the Madrid Region, and it harbours treasured examples of beech trees. It is one of the southernmost beech forests in Europe.

It dates back to 1460, when the inhabitants of Montejo bought the beech woodland by the Jarama river off a nobleman from Sepúlveda. Since then this beech forest has survived all manner of historical events. In 1974 it was declared a Site of National Interest, the only one in the Madrid Region. Wildlife includes the golden eagle, roe deer, otter and woodland birds. The richness of woodland species is outstanding, with over 1,000 species: 193 vertebrates, 694 vascular plants and 139 non vascular plants (lichens, mosses and fungi) have been counted.

Nature Tourism in the Sierra de Guadarrama National Park and Sierra del Rincón Biosphere Reserve

A farming past to explore in the present

Drovers' roads, cattle tracks and paths that have been in use for centuries can be explored to this day. As you walk through this landscape on numerous hiking trails, you will see pastureland, hedgerows, open highland, rivers, streams and wetlands. Hand dug irrigation channels flow through vegetable plots, hay fields and linen plantations. Fruit orchards were also highly prized in the area, and nowadays we can still see La Hiruela orchard. Water from the Jarama river was used to mill flour, and visitors can still see this in action in La Hiruela.

A cultural legacy to enjoy with all five senses

For those who want to discover the trades of previous generations there are ethnographic museums, old mills and working forges.

Pleasant walks will allow the visitor to observe popular building techniques of wood and thick outer stone walls, as well as churches and chapels linked to saints day festivities. Springs and irrigation channels water a great variety of pulses like Montejo beans, fruits like Hiruela apples. Beef cattle graze on rich pastureland. Local cuisine uses these fine products to delicious effect. This cultural heritage is alive in the five villages of the Biosphere Reserve.

Sierra de Guadarrama National Park

When I grow up I want to be.... An Explorer!

Description:

Explore the Cercedilla meadows with your children and discover hidden clues left by the wildlife of the Sierra de Guadarrama National Park. You will be given a checklist of things to look out for, and as your children and you go for a walk through this beautiful landscape they will be motivated to keep their eyes peeled and think creatively

They will collect different things along the way: leaves, pine cones, berries, animal fur, etc. They can use a simple key to help them identify the different animal and plant species that they discover along the way. We will analyze the water quality in the streams we find, and find out more about the lichen which grows in the valley. And remember! We will have to keep our eyes open and with luck we may spot some animals.

At the end of the walk, we will share our findings in the group and the guide will explain and answer any questions about what we have seen and found.

Length: 4 hours (10am - 2pm).

Includes: Guide and equipment for the activity.

Time of year: All year round.

Aimed at: Groups of adults, families with children (no age limit).

Price: €15 per person (children under 15 free).

Land Art. Art and nature in the Sierra de Guadarrama

Description:

This experience is based around the contemporary art technique of Land Art. On the Saturday, first you will sketch your surroundings. Our guide will explain the concepts of Land Art, artistic installations in wild areas, and will reinforce its non aggressive attitude which respects the landscape and natural environment it is made in. During this session, participants will get to know nature and will begin to feel at one with their surroundings. You will sketch and take photographs to work out the best space for the installation.

In the afternoon you will go on a guided horse ride in the Valle de la Fuenfría (1hour 30 mins).

On Sunday, with the Project now well under way, we will carry out the Land Art installation. You will document the installation with sketches and photos, since it is ephemeral.

Length: 2 days, 1 night.
